A code name for this case has been given by the Bureau as NORJAK and will be used in all communications.

There are currently 939 suspects, 922 of whom have been eliminated. New suspects are being developed and appropriate investigation is being instituted. No promising suspects are under consideration at this time.

Positive information will be immediately forwarded to the Bureau by appropriate communication.

The Bureau advised by teletype dated 5/5/78 to all offices that press inquiries concerning this important hijacking matter should be limited to certain specific information which was set out in the teletype and also all offices were to forward to Seattle any additional press inquiries received at other field divisions in order to preclude inadvertent disclosure of confidential information.

The investigative period of this report reflects the fact that investigation has been conducted on a daily basis by the Seattle Office as well as other divisions and also foreign countries. The Bureau will note that during the period of this report the Seattle file increased by approximately 185 serials for an average of about 30 serials per month.

Marshall, Virginia. They were unable to reach Marshall, due to the heavy snow and traffic tie-ups so they turned around and went back to Hay Market, Virginia on Route 15, stopping at Frostie's Diner at Warrington, Virginia to have coffee. Not being able to get out of the Warrington area to the area they had selected to hunt in, they then proceeded to Quantico, Marine Corps Base, Quantico, Virginia and en route on Highway 66, found a car "wrapped around a tree" and deserted. They then proceeded on Highway 66 to Vinthill Farms turn off and proceeded to Quantico.

He noted that it is a requirement in Quantico Marine Base, Quantico, Virginia, that one must register at the Marine Corps Base as a hunter and must receive an instruction at an unrecalled building, prior to hunting. RE: ROBERT WESLEY RACKSTRAW
SUB NUMBER 933

Re Sacramento airtel to Seattle, 5/5/78; Seattle airtel to Portland, 5/24/78.

Contact with USA SIDNEY I. LEZAK, District of Oregon, Portland, Oregon, on 6/12/78, determined that USA LEZAK wished to have the matter of the means of obtaining RACKSTRAW's palm prints researched before taking any action. He advised he would have the matter researched and advise.

On 6/26/78, USA LEZAK advised he had turned the matter over to First AUSA [REDACTED] District of Oregon.

On 7/3/78, First AUSA [REDACTED] advised that he wishes to explore the possibility of obtaining RACKSTRAW's palm prints through some other means than a subpoena or a court order. He accordingly requested that the identity of the District Attorney of the locality in which RACKSTRAW is to be tried for murder be obtained and furnished to him, so that he may contact that District Attorney and discuss the matter with him.

The following investigation was conducted by SA

AT BOISE, IDAHO

On July 31, 1978,

[redacted] Boise (temporary address) voluntarily appeared at the Boise Resident Agency after he learned from his mother the Federal Bureau of Investigation was interested in talking to him. He said he was in Boise visiting his family for a week, after which he will travel to Seattle to work there. He has no specific address or job in Seattle as of this date.

He advised that he had lived in Stanley, Idaho, in a mountain cabin during the past winter and traveled to Seattle in early June, 1978. He stated that he is a creative writer and artist and during the past winter he spent his time painting for a living. He formerly was associated with the "North Coast Times" in Eagle, Oregon, which has folded.

[redacted] said that he has always been intrigued by this matter and considered it to be a matter suitable as the basis of a novel. He was always interested in why the individual hijacked the plane and how he could be successful.

[redacted] said that in 1974, he contacted a man named [redacted] (no address) in Portland, Oregon, because while he considers himself to be a creative writer he is more of a reporter than a novelist. [redacted] is a novelist. He discovered that [redacted] had a [redacted] therefore, he, [redacted] backed out of the deal with [redacted] to write a novel.

[redacted] Fort Bragg, N. C., was contacted on 7/6/78, and after checking her records for the year 1974, advised she was unable to locate any record for an individual by the name of [redacted] as ever residing during that period of time on the military reservation on Fort Bragg.

b7C

On 7/6/78, [redacted] Fort Bragg, N. C., advised he has no records at this location on [redacted] but did state there is a possibility that a name check could be made if a dossier exists at the U. S. Army Intelligence Record Repository (USAIRR) at Fort Meade, Maryland. He stated it is possible a name check could be made which may contain either a date of birth, place of birth or Social Security Number if the individual, [redacted] had a background investigation or a dossier exists.

[redacted] stated he knows of no other location at Fort Bragg, N. C., where the needed military information could be obtained and that the only other place that he knows of is the 201 file which would be at the National Personnel Record Center at St. Louis, Missouri, if in fact [redacted] has been discharged.

Charlotte is unable to ascertain the date and place of birth, branch of service, military service number, dates of service or Social Security Number of [REDACTED] as stated above and also as shown in the communication of 5/16/78. Seattle may desire to furnish background information on this matter to Baltimore to have, if the possibility exists, a name check made of [REDACTED] through the U. S. Army Intelligence Record Repository at Fort Meade, Maryland. There is no other record available at Fort Bragg or in the Fayetteville, N. C., area whereby additional identifying or descriptive data of [REDACTED] could be obtained. As stated in Charlotte communication there were only two Instructors left at Fort Bragg who were here at the time [REDACTED] and as further shown in that communication one of the Sergeants presently at Fort Bragg advised that [REDACTED] was from either North or South Dakota and was discharged and upon his discharge he was reportedly returning to his home [REDACTED]

Contact made with the Identification Staff at the King County Sheriff's Office revealed that no facility was available for searching a latent print through an established file of known criminals.

On 7/25/78, contact made with the Seattle Police Department, Seattle, Washington, determined that a computerized system is established at the Seattle Police Department whereby a latent print, containing sufficient detail, could be classified and compared with the impressions of known individuals in this file.

On this same date 7/25/78, the photographs of 78 latent prints and one latent impression were furnished to the [REDACTED] of the Seattle Police Department for search in their computerized file. She stated that she would notify the agent as to when the search was completed.

b7CLEADS:SEATTLE DIVISIONAt Seattle, Washington

Maintain contact with Seattle Police Department, Identification Section, for the results of a search in their file and thereafter obtain all photographs of latents previously furnished so that they may be furnished another agency for search of a similar file.

He says he has been working on this theory and has searched a number of areas of Lake Merwin, and wanted specific information as to the possible landing area.

I informed him that insofar as I could recall, the entire matter of exactly where he landed is conjecture due to a number of variables, i.e., wind on the night in question; size of chute; weight of the individual; period of time before UNSUB released parachute, etc.

This matter was referred to SA [redacted] in an attempt to resolve any of the questions which [redacted] may have.

Re suspect HOWARD ROGER MASTERSON.

Re Los Angeles airtel to Portland dated 7/25/78.

For information of Los Angeles and Seattle, on 7/25/78, [redacted] Washington County Sheriff's Office, Hillsboro, Oregon, furnished the following information:

HOWARD ROGER MASTERSON, white male, DOB 10/6/46, was found dead of a drug overdose in Washington County on 5/30/72. The Washington County Sheriff's Office conducted the necessary investigation which included the positive identification of MASTERSON by several immediate relatives. Investigation was conducted under their case number 72-3108. The investigation established, in addition to the positive identity of MASTERSON, the fact that the death was due to voluntary ingestion of drugs.

[redacted] continued that recently several relatives of MASTERSON, more distant than the ones who identified him at the time of his death, have raised the question as to whether MASTERSON may still be alive, and as a result it has been suggested that the buried body be exhumed for re-identification. [redacted] stated his office is completely satisfied with the validity of the identification and does not intend to go any further with the idea. He stated the people that raised the doubts alleged that they felt there was a possibility that MASTERSON was still alive and living in Mexico using the last name COOPER. He said that these individuals inferred that possibly MASTERSON might have been identical with UNSUB in captioned case.

that MASTERSON could have had nothing to do with the captioned matter because of the vast discrepancy in age and physical description. He stated he feels it is merely a ruse, those members of the family desirous of establishing re-identification to bring pressure to bare for such an operation. He stated he was advising the Portland FBI Office inasmuch as members of the family indicated that they were going to take the matter to the FBI since they had been turned down by the sheriff's office.

In view of the above circumstances and considering the considerable discrepancy in age and description, it is not belived necessary for the FBI to take any further action in this matter, and accordingly Portland plans no further action concerning this suspect.

Approximately four to five years ago, he was fishing on Lake Merwin, located near Woodland, Washington. While doing so, he found a piece of nylon cord in the lake, which was badly deteriorated. This cord was white in color and it was his opinion that it was part of an old ski rope, inasmuch as it had a mechanical weave, much like a ski rope. He stated that at first, he became quite excited when he saw the cord, thinking that perhaps it was from a parachute, but he realized the cord was not twisted like a parachute cord. He stated that because of this, he then threw away the cord.

Re Portland airtel to Seattle, 8/10/78.

On 10/11/78, one day prior to his trial in Stockton, California, ROBERT RACKSTRAW rented a $55,000 plane from Bridgeford Flying Service and later that day called in a "Mayday" advising that his plane was on fire and he was forced to ditch in the ocean approximately 12 miles out of Monterey, California.

Investigation by the U.S. Coast Guard failed to find any sign of wreckage and it is believed that subject flew the plane to Mexico.

In view of the above, Sacramento is conducting no further investigation on this matter; however, if subject is located and arrested he will be returned to Stockton, California and major case prints will be obtained.

Subject No. 933

Re Portland airtel to Seattle, 8/10/78.

On 10/11/78, one day prior to his trial in Stockton, California, ROBERT RACKSTRAW rented a $55,000 plane from Bridgeford Flying Service and later that day called in a "Mayday" advising that his plane was on fire and he was forced to ditch in the ocean approximately 12 miles out of Monterey, California.

Investigation by the U.S. Coast Guard failed to find any sign of wreckage and it is believed that subject flew the plane to Mexico.

In view of the above, Sacramento is conducting no further investigation on this matter; however, if subject is located and arrested he will be returned to Stockton, California and major case prints will be obtained.

He heard on the news that a plastic decal, possibly from D. B. COOPER's plane, was found in the Castle Rock, Washington, area recently. He recalled that in October, 1978, he was hunting in that general area and saw in a tall tree something flapping. The area he was in was north of Toutle Park. This item he saw in the tree was light in color and he feels, perhaps, that might have been a parachute, possibly the one used by COOPER. He did indicate, however, this thing he saw could have been a weather parachute and could have been there in his previous trips to that area, although he has not seen it before. He does not know if this information will be of any assistance to the FBI, but in the event the FBI desires to find the exact location of this item, he and his cousin are willing to escort the FBI into the area and point out the article, if they can find it, to the FBI.

Re [REDACTED]

Re Seattle letter to Portland dated 3/6/79.

[REDACTED] Washington, telephone [REDACTED] was interviewed at his place of employment, [REDACTED] Portland, Oregon, telephone [REDACTED] on 4/23/79, at which time he furnished the following information:

For several years during the late 60's and early 70's, [REDACTED] of Southwest Washington.

He [REDACTED]

He worked [REDACTED] and accumulated a little money. Everything he owns, he has worked very hard for. He has all of his bank records, his employment records, and his tax records which will show his financial structure.

On the afternoon of November 24, 1971, the day of the hijacking in this matter, he was contacted by telephone at approximately 3:00 p.m., by a young man, whose father-in-law is one (FNU) [REDACTED] who lives near Kelso, Washington. The son-in-law advised that his father-in-law had gone fishing on Lake Merwin, and had not returned as he had said he would. The young man said he had notified local authorities that he considered his father-in-law to be in trouble, but they would do nothing until the father-in-law had been missing for a longer time. The young man stated to [REDACTED] that it was not like his father-in-law to be gone without letting his daughter know, and so they knew something had happened to him.

The young man convinced [] that the father-in-law must be in trouble, and so he, [] then attempted to enlist the aid of the local authorities to form up a search. They declined also, and as the weather worsened, he decided [] and go searching for the man, even though the weather was worsening.

[] continued that shortly after 8:00 p.m., he and a deputy sheriff [] [] searching for the elderly man. They found him after several hours clinging to his overturned boat, and nearly dead of hypothermia. They rescued the man, and he has since recovered fully.

b6

[] stated that night was the stormiest in his experience, and the winds were so high, they turned Lake Merwin into giant waves [] and [] He said that at the same time the clouds were so close to the water, that there was a dense fog and he was unable to see more than a few feet ahead of []

b6
b7C

[] related that he was contacted by two FBI Agents shortly after the hijacking, and related the above experience to them. He said he could not recall having heard an airplane fly over at any time during the storm.

b6

In view of the above information, no further investigation concerning [] would appear warranted in this matter.

Dear [Redacted]

For your information, we have not located a subject in the November 24, 1971, hijacking of a Northwest Airlines plane between Portland, Oregon, and Seattle, Washington. We have investigated almost 1,000 suspects and the case is still in a pending status with our office. We will keep you advised as to developments.

Very truly yours,

Re: Hijacking Northwest Airlines ONR
Date of Loss: November 24, 1971

Dear [Redacted]

b6
b7C

It has been brought to our attention that in all probability a heavy plastic placard from a Boeing 727, found in November 1978 by a hunter, could be a link to the unsolved subject.

We would appreciate your advices as to if the authorities plan any additional investigation into the matter or if any additional link or evidence has been uncovered.

Yours very truly

She indicated the last correspondence she had was from [redacted] in December, 1978.

[redacted] stated that [redacted] of KNBC News, Los Angeles, has been in touch with her company concerning a news story he is working on which in fact reports that the FBI is investigating a particular suspect in this case. She wanted to know if the FBI, in fact, has a suspect or anyone under arrest in this matter.

She was informed the FBI has checked out over 1000 suspects over the years and continually receives allegations that individuals are identical with "D.B. COOPER" and that the FBI does check such allegations out. She was informed that the FBI does not have any one under arrest in connection with this crime.

She requested that she be advised promptly in the event an individual is arrested for the NORJAC case.

Dear [redacted]

I don't know why you would think it strange that I would come back to [redacted] the second-time in-in 153RS. The last time I was cold & very wet. I don't really know if your Boss heard from his brother in Baldwin Park back in 81., or not, of course [redacted] had expressed the wish that I had bi-passed that address, in favor of her's in [redacted] but B.P. was closer...

By the way, since you people were not entirely hep as to what act 1 was all about, you could hardly be expected to know what act's 2 & 3 were all about. Let me attempt now to give you an example about legends.

Shoot out at O.K. Corral, was a local event. But it built & spread back east to become a national legend.

So, as time went forward, say until November of 1971. Not many legends were forthcoming from out west. Then it happened. A hipster named D. B. Cooper put [redacted] on the map & the route led as it built, to capture the imagination of not only the east, but the entire

b6
b7C

b6
b7C

b6
b7C

nation, North & South as well.

It also became a threat to certain individuals, unbeknown to you.

So these individuals think tank decided to destroy that legend, but how can one kill a legend?"

and the answer was very simple, really. They would produce a movie. "The Pursuit of D. B. Cooper."

They would let this (R) rated movie be shown in theatres, and on television at the same time.?? a movie made for television showing in theatres at the same time.?? Now your beginning to see something that was obviously overlooked. But first the pump-up in advertisement on T.V., in such a manner that would catch-the-eye of the viewing public. a public that was expecting a good wholesome (in their livingroom) motion picture. Then the R & P movie was finally shown on T.V. It turned people off with some of the filthy scenes. Perhaps even the people of Grief themselves & thus D. B. Cooper was built not into a legend, but as a heap. Mission accomplished.

now come act-3. The straw that broke the legends back.

"The name of D-B. Cooper, was erroneously type into the hijacker's name by a ~~writer~~ reporter covering the story for the wire services." The name given was Dan Cooper."

"Wasnt this P-R, a masterstroke?"
a name change after 8-years?"

"Why would they bother?" "Dan Cooper Day..."

"What was so significant about the initials D-B?" That, began to scare them.

I will tell you it was a profound initial, & it was D.B. Cooper, not Dan.

Then I should include act-4.

There would be a few people coming to to see if they could find D-B's Elcot. So the farmer's planted 6-grand of their $20. & had someone find them on a riverbank. This ruse had a double-edged effect. The fallout was that the adventures seeking to find this loot would know now that it was impossible. The other side was, if they could convince D-B. that they had in fact found some of his loot... he would check it out & they would (none)

b6
b7c

snab him in the act.

But D-B, never moved because D-B, knew it was nothing but a sting, one that backfired on the would-be stinger's.

Here's how. The found loot had to be released to the finder, or so it was reported in the media's. Now let's take another look at that condition.

First, if those $20. bills were identified as those requested, by D-B, and the insurance company that repaid Northwest Orient Airlines the $200,000⁰⁰, then, by law, those funds go back to the rightful owner. The insurance company. A finder's-fee would be in order under normal circumstances. Not 1/2 of what was found. Now we read where some, if not all of those $20.00 bills would be worth up to $1,000 each. But that, in itself would have given the sting attempt away. Those $20.00 used, were printed after November 24th 1971. Coin collectors would have uncovered that, & Pow! So these bills were kept as hard-evidence, & other funds were used to pay off this kid, & insurance co. D-B assured me that he knew where 9,998 of the original 10,000 $20. are. "So you see Norma, how it is..."

But D-B told me that you can expect him to be in [redacted] home November 24, 1986, to crank up D-B Day, bigger than ever before, so please ask [redacted] to make lots of Buffalo Stew. By the way, their production company Pblagram, was formed for just this one motion picture & then as suddenly, went out of the movie production business altogether....?? You could phone them for this same information. They still have a phone, but, "that's all folks"; until November.

Re Sacramento airtel to the Bureau, dated 3/8/79.

For information of all recipients, on 3/15/79, AUSA
 [redacted] District of Oregon, Portland, Oregon, advised as follows:

Departmental Attorney [redacted] telephonically advised [redacted] this date that he had received a communication from one [redacted] Attorney. [redacted] Oakland, California, telephone [redacted] advised him that he represents a client whom he did not identify who is willing to provide information which will prove he is the UNSUB in this matter in return for immunity from federal prosecution. [redacted] instructed [redacted] to have the Portland Case Agent contact [redacted] by telephone in an attempt to determine the validity of this claim and to evaluate the potential for benefit to this investigation.

It is noted that during the period April, 1978 to March, 1979, investigation has been conducted to eliminate or involve one ROBERT WESLEY RACKSTRAW. RACKSTRAW is now only 35 years old, and at the time of the hijacking in this matter, would have been approximately 28 years old. UNSUB in this matter was described as late 40's or early 50's in 1971, with the median age of the description being 48 years. This would indicate a disparity of approximately 20 years, and RACKSTRAW would not appear to be a very good suspect.

RACKSTRAW has been the subject of highly publicized prosecution for major crimes in California, and is now incarcerated in a California penitentiary. The Sacramento Office advised in May, 1978, that at that time RACKSTRAW was in custody feigning a back injury which required him to be transported in a wheelchair. Custodial personnel felt he was doing this in an attempt to effect a possible escape. It was noted that RACKSTRAW is a former U. S. Army Green Beret and Vietnam veteran highly skilled in the use of his hands and feet as weapons.

Sacramento Office further advised that on 5/4/78, [redacted] Stockton, California Police Department advised he has heard that [redacted] is a lawyer in Oakland, California. [redacted]

b7C

[redacted] He wondered if this might indicate that RACKSTRAW's suspected involvement in the 1975 theft of explosives at the Felton Quarry, Santa Cruz, California, some of which were later acquired from the New World Liberation Front by the FBI at Richmond, California in early 1976, might mean that RACKSTRAW intentionally obtained the explosives for the radicals. He stated that [redacted] reportedly was formerly in partnership with [redacted] another reported [redacted] [redacted] reportedly [redacted] San Francisco Police Department, [redacted]

In view of the above information, Portland SA [redacted] [redacted] after consultation with Supervisor [redacted] of the Seattle Division, suggested to AUSA [redacted] that [redacted] in furtherance of Departmental Attorney [redacted] request. AUSA [redacted] was furnished a list of questions which could be asked anyone claiming to be UNSUB in this matter, the answers to which could only be known by the UNSUB and investigators close to the case. [redacted] was not provided with the answers to the questions.

Subsequently, on the same date, [redacted] advised he had been in telephonic contact with [redacted] who requested the list

D.B. Cooper, where are you?

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — More than 1,000 suspects have been investigated in the D.B. Cooper hijacking — the nation's only unsolved air piracy case, the FBI says. Now there's speculation the FBI has another suspect.

A man calling himself D. Cooper parachuted from an airliner with $200,000 and disappeared without a trace in the rugged terrain of Washington state more than seven years ago.

ROBERT WESLEY Rackstraw — pilot, explosives expert and a suspect in assorted crimes — was sought for questioning in the Cooper case last year, FBI agent Pete Norregard confirmed.

But Rackstraw disappeared, officials said, by faking a plane crash in Monterey Bay to avoid trial on check-kiting charges. Now he's in custody again. Rackstraw, 35, is in San Joaquin jail on $650,000 bail.

"He's a hell of a con man — you'd buy a used car from him every time," said Deputy Dist. Atty. Clark Sueyres. "He was also in the Pacific Northwest operating a light plane service at the time of the D.B. Cooper hijacking and was trained in parachuting while a Green Beret.

"I think that's how the speculation started. I know it crossed the minds of the Stockton police investigators and they mentioned it to the FBI."

The FBI in Seattle is handling the Cooper case, and would not confirm or deny interest in Rackshaw.

THE COOPER hijacking occurred Nov. 24, 1971, on a Northwest Airlines flight between Portland and Seattle. Cooper let passengers off in Seattle and collected $200,000 ransom and four parachutes.

After the plane took off again, he bailed out over forest land in Clark County, Washington. No trace of him, the parachute or the money has ever been reported, despite several searches.

The crime was before there was a statute of limitations on air piracy cases, so the investigation is continuing, authorities said.

Rackstraw was arrested Friday in Southern California for trying to duplicate a pilot's license and medical certificates at a Fullerton printing shop, authorities said.

He was returned to Stockton to face charges of grand theft of an airplane, possession of explosives, check forgery and issuing checks with insufficient funds.

Last Oct. 11, six days before he was to have gone on trial on those charges, Rackstraw took off in a rented plane on a flight from Stockton to Monterey.

The Federal Aviation Administration said Rackstraw radioed a mayday distress call and said he was going to ditch the plane in the bay after reporting smoke in the cockpit.

But officials said that was a hoax and the plane was later found, repainted, at a Southern California airport.

On her way home on 4/22/79, from the lot, she noticed a piece of white cloth in a tree on the right hand side of the road going south, approximately five miles from Lake Merwin, between Fargher Lake and Amboy, Washington. She advised the cloth appeared to be heavy silk or possibly fiberglass material, raveled on the edges and about 18 inches long and 12 inches wide. She immediately thought of the COOPER case and thought the cloth could be a piece of the parachute. She advised she could direct an Agent to the site.

On 4/24/79, [redacted] accompanied SC JOAN M. THOMAS and SA [redacted] to the location and pointed out the cloth, which was not possible to identify from the highway. Upon retrieval, however, it was determined the cloth was part of a corn and barley bag from Albers Milling Company.

The Cricket's 'D.B. Cooper' is leap into rare experience

Jane Murray and Don Amendolia in 'D.B. Cooper'

DB Cooper-17028

164-81-8098

"The D.B. Cooper Project," in its premiere production at the Cricket Theatre, is a work of unique dramatic imagination that boggles most conventional assessments.

Even when John Orlock's "musical fantasy" goes amiss, it still continues to add up small points toward an impressive theatrical and emotional totality.

The very concept is enough to make most of us shake our prosaic heads. Many playwrights could come up with some grabby story ideas about D.B. Cooper, the pseudonym for the 1971 hijacker who parachuted from an airliner over Washington state and disappeared into legend with $200,000 in as yet unrecovered ransom money.

But a drama that deals only with his pre-heist humdrum? A life so mud-fence, all-American unremarkable? Wholly without any large gestures or commanding characters? And interspersed with poignant or funny little songs?

I can only ask you to accept on faith that Orlock's off-beat idea somehow works: It is grabby precisely because it does not try to grab, or pander to our dramatic expectations. Wisely keeping it small, almost the seed of an idea, the author has created something able to grow and spread in any direction our own imaginations are able to follow.

Orlock took his text from a letter signed "D.B. Cooper" that was sent to several newspapers a month after the crime. The writer (whoever he was) denied being a professional criminal ("I never even got a parking ticket") but said: "I am no modern day Robin Hood," and added, "Unfortunately, I do have only 14 months to live."

The letter speaks of a life that had been filled with "agony, turmoil, hate and more hate" and explains that the extorted money

"was to gain a few fast grains of peace of mind."

It is the person who would have written such a letter that fascinates Orlock. Happily, he was not influenced by the sensational mythologizing of the crime in constructing his imagined character. His chief interest centers on what, in terms of ordinary American life, some average man would regard as "agony, turmoil and hate," what he might consider "peace of mind" in facing an early death, even what image of a "Robin Hood" he felt honor-bound to reject.

So, we start with the drably mundane figure of Aaron Tarkus, who runs a failing gas station in Camden, N.J., is unhappily and childlessly married to someone from high school and has no emotional, social or intellectual life outside weekend TV football with two nonentity buddies.

Orlock's amusing and original "Indulgences in the Louisville Harlem" was a hit last season at the Cricket, but this new play, by triumphing over its very imperfections, reveals a growing depth, sensitivity and awareness that true drama is created inside characters, and to the degree that they are given functional human reality and dimensions.

It is these qualities that confer interest and a strangely urgent significance on the unpromising Aaron Tarkus and his dreary associations—not as some latent superman but as a Joe Doakes whose hurts and hopes are as important to him as those of any towering dramatic characters.

In the amazing hands of Don Amendolia, Aaron almost imperceptibly emerges from a negligible jerk (a whining commentary on the frauds and baubles of the American Dream) into something like epic pathos. He acquires old stature, however misguided, in his determination finally to do at least one thing right—even if it is too late and even if it is wrong. In the process, in extremity, we see the unrecognized (or defeated) better feelings and possibilities that had lain sadly fallow in him all along.

This sounds very heavy; but Orlock and the Cricket crew drop it on us only after laying a deceptive groundwork, part frisky inconsequence and part commonplace human troubles.

Fred Thompson is Aaron's business partner and original "brains" of the hijack scheme to break them out of their circular hopelessness. Clive Rosengren is the other loud-mouthed boob, equally unlikely for such high enterprise.

Mildly surreal staging devices establish the fantasy tone: All the props (beer cans, eating utensils, "things") are twice life-size; the people wear ghastly bargain-basement garments in clashing colors and patterns; revolving backdrop panels inject them into changing times and places.

I found the music only sporadically effective. "Betty's Waltz," sung by Jane Murray, broke my heart as Aaron's wife mourned dead love over a box of face powder—the long-ago last gift he had given her—"bought on sale." "This Is My Sister" is delightful comic patter, the roommate complaints of sexy Camille Gifford and "plain-Jane" Dolores Noah—unwittingly involved with the hijack plotters.

Too many of the numbers, however, seemed irrelevant padding, and not interesting enough as separate songs. Perhaps intentionally (to avoid slick "musical" lyricism?), most were played in the wrong key for individual singers, making the voices unmelodious and words often unintelligible.

But, a gritty truth and deeply moving humanity cut through both the usefully distancing whimsy and the unneeded artifice to make "D.B. Cooper" a rare theater experience.

Legend of a hijacker comes to Cricket Theater

By Mike Steele
Staff Writer

On Thanksgiving Eve 1971, a mild-mannered man using the name D.B. Cooper hijacked a Northwest Airlines 727 and, somewhere south of Seattle, parachuted out clutching $200,000 in $20 bills. He hasn't been seen since.

It was a great mystery and Cooper became something of a folk hero. Songs were written about his dazzling escapade and D.B. Cooper took his place alongside Robin Hood, Jean Lafitte and all three musketeers.

Almost overlooked during the episode, however, was a letter received by several newspapers a month after the hijacking. It was written by a man who claimed to be Cooper. The letter said, "I am no modern-day Robin Hood. Unfortunately I do have only 14 months to live." He took the money, he wrote, "to gain a few fast grains of peace of mind."

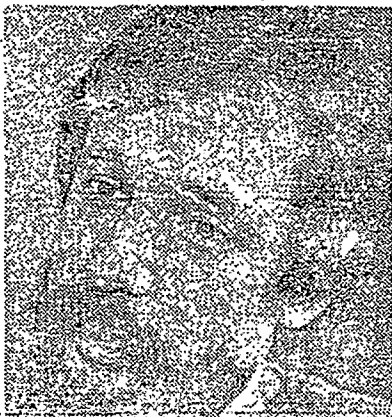

One who didn't overlook the letter was playwright John Orlock. "I was fascinated by that letter," explained the 33-year-old writer, "especially a part where he wrote about living a life of agony, turmoil, hate and more hate. It was a beautiful piece of writing, straightforward and simple, the kind of letter a D.B. Cooper would have written. Let's face it, the hijacking was one of the great acts of imagination of our time, the idea of taking the money and leaving the airplane up there."

"I clipped that letter and put it in my files for a few years. I was thinking about it during that time, however, and it kept coming out in my mind as a musical, a small cabaret musical. Then five years ago we performed a rough draft of it in a workshop at Penn State where I was teaching. It only had five songs and only two or three of those original scenes remain today."

But he has worked and reworked it since, and last year "The D.B. Cooper Project" was done in a reading during the Cricket Theater's late-night works-in-progress series. It worked well enough that the Cricket is presenting it on its main stage beginning Friday through May 5, under Lou Salerni's direction.

The play, like most of Orlock's to date, will be a comic drama. It won't be the big, metaphorical statement he'll be after but, as he put it, "just people in a situation, a look at what happens when interesting characters are placed in a situation that will knock them around. I never start a play saying, 'I want to say this.' It's deadly. What really makes me cringe is when a playwright uses the title of the play as a metaphor in the play, you know, here comes the Streetcar Named Desire. I look for character and let metaphors find themselves through them."

Orlock's characters tend to be based on historical fact, then shot through with the writer's imagination. His "Indulgences in the Louisville Har-lem," one of last year's hits at the Cricket, featured a mesmerist from the International Institute of Science and Populism. The mesmerist, it turned out, was mute and had to be accompanied by a friend who said all his words for him though the ideas behind the words, we were assured, were the mesmerist's.

John Orlock

He has also written plays about a man who played the organ in a Boston subway station and about the Golden Girl, the first female baton twirler to march with a college marching band. His latest play, recently given in the Cricket's works-in-progress series, "Revolution of the Heavenly Orbs," is about a 12th-century French cathedral builder.

If there's one thing that typifies Orlock's plays to date it is the way he begins with logical, historical situations and lets those situations zoom through logic right off the wall, often into surprisingly tender emotions.

"The humor is so important," said Orlock, "in terms of holding an audience. If you can make them laugh they'll follow you anywhere, right through logic into areas you could never get them to follow you normally. You simply can't bore an audience and move them too. I'm learning that more and more, how to hold an audience and how I can turn that back in on itself or into a different level."

He pulls his comedy from many styles. "I've been watching Abbott and Costello lately," he said. "It's just absolutely primal, basic material, beautifully built. The 'Who's on First?' sketch is to comedy what Bach is to music. I also watch old television series, like Sgt. Bilko. It was well written formally and just needs a content injection. And I love Moliere.

"What I'm after is situational comedy, the kind that builds from characters to the point where the audience finally says 'Oh, no, he isn't really going to do that!' It takes a bit more time to build those situations as opposed to just joke humor, but it's so much richer."

Orlock also wrote the 11 songs in this, his first musical. In fact, in the best tradition of musical theater, he had just completed the final one a week or so before opening.

"I have a background in piano," he said, "but I haven't composed much. I did do some small film scores and some commercial work, but not much. The one song last year in 'Louisville Harem' was my first theater song. I don't think I can really describe my style. I look for theater music, songs that are scenes in themselves. I like a lot of early Kurt Weill music but I'm still exploring. This piece is scored for two pianos, harp and either percussion or strings. Not sure yet. I had a tuba in there first but when the harp came in I dropped it. The harp was an amazing instrument, perfect, ethereal flying music."

Orlock is a native of Philadelphia and has taught at both Penn State and Boston University. He set out to become an actor and director but about nine years ago took a playwriting course that showed him to be a writer of some skill. He soon won a Shubert Playwriting award to study at Penn State, where he wrote his first full-length play.

"I felt the great satisfaction of hearing an audience respond," he said, "and found out how nice that could be. I wrote only off and on for a while but I was getting more and more reinforcement and finally in late 1973, when I began 'D.B. Cooper,' I made the commitment to playwriting."

He came to Minneapolis in 1975 because he was tired of teaching and had heard the theater scene was promising. He and his wife loaded up a U-Haul and breezed into Minneapolis on Labor Day. He spent the first year selling calculators at Dayton's by day, teaching theater at the Guild of Performing Arts at night. He wrote and directed a few shows there and finally, a year ago, was named a playwright-in-residence at the Playwrights' Lab.

"It is a very, very useful program," he said. "I'm still involved with it. It's an opportunity to take good actors and a director and say, 'All right, I'd like to present this work. And then work on it and see how it plays. Out of the Lab work I can hear the piece, rewrite it and work it out. I still like to work this way. The Cricket's works-in-progress series has worked out the same way. It's a very nice way to bring a play along.'"

Starting next fall, Orlock will become the Cricket's literary manager in charge of reading new scripts, helping with play selection and, of course, writing.

"Above all," he said, "it will be a steady salary. I'll phase out most of my teaching and be able to concentrate on professional theater. In fact, until they asked me to take that position I had seriously thought about going back to college teaching, just to put bread on the table. I wasn't too happy with those prospects. Believe me, it feels much better to be in the theater."

Northwest 727 hijacker Cooper made a quantum leap into mists of mythology

By John Kerans

You can't tell a book by its cover. Nor a crook by the crime he's committed. But if you can't read the book, or you can't find the crook—then surely some speculation's permitted.

Take the case of D. B. Cooper, who 7½ years ago used a bomb-threat to take command of a 727 jet, then parachuted to freedom with $200,000 extorted from Northwest Airlines. No trace of Cooper was ever found. And since it's the only such unsolved crime in American history, you could say Cooper wrote the book on skyjacking. But he took the book along the night he made his quantum leap. And that's where the speculation begins.

The playwright:

John Orlock began to wonder about D. B. Cooper a few weeks after the crime was committed. Orlock found a letter purportedly from Cooper reprinted in the New York Times and he clipped it out. Orlock still has that clipping, though it's yellowed with age.

(In the letter, "Cooper" said in part that he had only 14 months to live and that "I knew from the start that I wouldn't be caught.")

"I read it and got the feeling of a man who finally decided to do something with his life. There was a great sadness and a great courage here," says Orlock, his fingertips touching the clipping.

"If this was indeed the case, that he was dying—and I am sure that he is now dead—then there was a certain justice here. It was a haunting piece of writing. Most importantly, I could feel a 'personality' emerging."

Sub B

More than a personality emerged. So did a play, "The D. B. Cooper Project," which opens Friday night at the Cricket Theater. Orlock cautions that the play is not simply about skyjackings. "I just tried to write good characters. The skyjacking is just a hook. It's not about that. It's about people and how they respond under certain circumstances."

The circumstances here are those of failure. "Cooper is a man for whom nothing has ever gone right. His marriage went down the drain. His gas station folded. He's been passed over by the American dream. He's not a folk hero. He's a negative personality. But he has a transformation. He becomes D. B. Cooper."

But what if the letter was a fake? What if John Orlock was inspired by the contrivance of a prankster?

"No!" says Orlock firmly. "There is a feeling here that is right for me. The flow in the letter is thought-by-thought. It COULD have been a fake. But as a playwright, I would have had a hard time writing a better letter than this."

The article about the letter was published six days before Christmas. And it ran a little short. So somebody at the New York Times stuck in a holiday slogan to bring that column of the newspaper to its proper length.

It reads, "Remember the neediest." Right there on John Orlock's clipping.

The reporter:

Leverett Richards thinks the D. B. Cooper letter was a fake.

"It just didn't seem to jive with the facts in the case," Richards explains.

Richards certainly has the facts. They fill one full drawer of his desk in the newsroom at the Portland Oregonian. He's been following the case since the night it happened.

"Besides, Cooper couldn't have survived. It quickly became evident to me that he landed in Lake Merwin. That's up in Washington state, about 35 miles north of Portland, where the FBI figured he made the jump. It's my bet that Cooper's body is still down there.

"I'm a pilot. And I've talked to pilots who were flying that night. There was terrific turbulence. Cooper couldn't have picked a worse night.

"If this fellow Cooper could organize a letter, he would have organized the skyjacking too and he didn't. Everybody I've talked to—pilots and parachutists—they all feel his chances for survival were pretty grim."

But Richards will concede one thing. It's a hell of a mystery. Last January, somebody found a plastic placard from the rear stairs of a 727 jet in the suspected drop area. But aside from that, there have been no other clues.

And what about Cooper's character? "He was a born loser," Richards snaps. He had no upbringing. That's no way to do things. I don't have much patience with those who think they can get rich at the expense of others.

"But you asked me about his character. Well, he was from a broken home or he had no family. Because no one has ever been reported missing that matches his description.

"Obviously, he has no military experience as a parachutist or a pilot. Otherwise," Richards rasps in disbelief, "he would have known you couldn't bail out there. It's rough country. It was overcast. And I don't see how he could have known the elevation."

Leverett Richards won't be coming to see "The D. B. Cooper Project." He can't get away from work. But his son—a research scientist at the 3M Company in St. Paul—has promised his father he'll see the show and report back.

The son is named Durkee B. Richards. Abbreviated, of course, that's "D. B. . . ."

The storekeepers:

Just as firmly as Leverett Richards talks about D. B. Cooper in the past, then storekeeper Germaine Tricola describes him in the present.

"Of course, he's alive!" she says with a smile. "Cause nothing's ever been found. We've lost folks before, but we've always found the remains."

Until recently, Tricola ran the Ariel Store & Tavern. It's tucked into the foothills of Washington's Cascade Mountains, at a point directly below which Cooper is calculated to have hit the silk. Up the road lies Lake Merwin.

"Fell into the lake? He couldn't have. With the drought we had two years ago, something would have shown up. Body, parachute, money bag—something. You could even see the tree stumps then."

For several years, Tricola—who moved to Washington from Hugo, Minn., 30 years ago—has staged a D. B. Cooper party on Thanksgiving. The party has drawn guests from as far away as Toronto and as near as the local FBI office in Portland. Tricola just sold the store, but the new owners plan to continue the tradition.

The Ariel Store & Tavern caters to the logging crowd. Rough men doing rough work, clearing away tall pines, fir and cedars clustered together so thick that the sunlight has a hard time getting through.

(A man on a parachute might have a hard time getting through, too. But there are plenty of "clear cuts" where the logging companies have toppled the timbers and taken them out on trucks.)

"We've had jumpers land right next to the store. Last year, a professional parachutist from Portland and two of his students came right down. I think that's what Cooper did.

"He was a man who liked a challenge. A loner. I don't think he needed the money. Maybe he didn't have anything to do on Thanksgiving."

If this is where D. B. Cooper landed with the $200,000 ransom, then he fell in with good company. A long time ago, before reforestation programs, the loggers had a slogan.

Simply put, it read: "Get yours and get out."

The Psychiatrist

David Hubbard cursed the idea of a musical about D. B. Cooper when he learned of it.

"I'm of the opinion that this type of thing doesn't need to be perpetuated. Cooper represented no ideals and no values. He's not a folk hero. He was a man acting selfishly. The number of people who can be harmed by men who think they'll be immortalized is innumerable."

In 1971, Hubbard wrote a book called "The Skyjacker." It's the only psychiatric study of the "skyjacking personality," and it's based on dozens of interviews with men who committed the crime.

Hubbard's premise is that we are bound together by twofold gravity. One part is physical—which holds us to earth. Another is emotional—which holds us to each other. Skyjacking, he concludes, is a defiance of both realities.

Hubbard also believes in "mutations." One man commits the crime; another emulates it. Cooper—he points out—was not the first to get together parachutes, bombs and disguises. A Canadian tried the same trick in Calgary three weeks before. Hubbard assumes Cooper read about it and tried to go the Canadian one better. He did—the Canadian was caught and Cooper was not.

"Cooper created nothing," says Hubbard. "He was an imitative creature like all the rest who followed."

There certainly were plenty to follow—though none succeeded. Eventually, the back stairs on 727 jets were modified to lock in flight. And that was the end of that.

"I took the notorious and made it commonplace," says Hubbard. "You want to take the commonplace—and D. B. Cooper was commonplace—and make it notorious. I don't buy that."

Psychiatrist David Hubbard does all his work at the Aberrant Behavior Center in Dallas. He lives nearby. Back in 1971, Hubbard—like Cooper—received $200,000.

But Hubbard's money came from a private benefactor. It was given to finance a study on skyjacking.

No hunt set for skyjacker

See related story, Page 11.

By COLUMBIAN STAFF, AP

An FBI agent here said this morning that the piece of plastic decal found by a Kelso hunter last November could have dropped from any Boeing 727, not necessarily the one hijacker D.B. Cooper bailed out of Thanksgiving eve 1971.

John Gordon of the bureau's Vancouver office said, "There is no positive proof that the decal came from the Cooper plane."

An FBI spokesman in Seattle, speculated Thursday that the decal may have fallen off the Cooper plane when the craft was used for a re-enactment of the hijacking six weeks after it occurred.

"We noticed the decal was missing after that, but not before," the spokesman said.

A spokesman added that the placards, used to give emergency directions for the rear door on 727s, have been known to fall off under normal conditions.

Earlier this week Cowlitz County

Sheriff Les Nelson disclosed the discovery of the decal last November by Carroll Hicks, a self-employed welder from Kelso who was elk hunting when he found the bit of debris.

"It's one in a million that any other plane could have lost it in the area in which D.B. Cooper jumped," Nelson said.

But while the 10-inch square decal has stirred wide interest, Gordon expressed doubt it would help solve the mystery behind the case.

"It's interesting, but I don't think it will help us find Cooper," he said of the decal.

Gordon said the FBI has no plans to resume the search for Cooper and the $200,000 that left the airplane with him.

Cowlitz County officials have indicated they do not plan to search for Cooper, either, but they did say they hope to encourage people to "keep their eyes open," when they are in the area the decal was found about 12 miles east of Kelso.

On 4/19/79, [redacted] Beaver Creek, Oregon, telephonically contacted SA [redacted] at the Astoria, Oregon, Resident Agency. [redacted] advised that approximately two and one half years ago, while in Hood River, Oregon, he had a conversation with an individual regarding "D.B. COOPER." This individual indicated he had been a paratrooper in the Army. During the conversation, this person became upset and nervous and left. Several months later, [redacted] advised he observed a photograph in a local newspaper (composite), and that it was very similar to the individual he had talked to in Hood River. [redacted] advised he does not know the person's name or where he lives. He advised that he probably could find out if went back to the Hood River area. He advised that this individual possibly worked at a plywood mill in Hood River. [redacted] advised he could offer no further information of value regarding this individual or of captioned matter. It is noted that the Portland Office has received numerous leads from the Hood River, Oregon, area, concerning this matter, principally because of the residence there of the individual who originally furnished information alleging that unsub and DAVID BRYANT COFFELT were identical. That individual has persisted in his allegation that COFFELT was unsub despite the fact that his original story does not square with the known facts of the case.

For approximately the last three years he has received little bits of information through a source whose identity he cannot presently divulge indicating the source has a connection with an individual who claims to have some knowledge of captioned hijacking. [redacted] has sent back questions through his source in an effort to find out as much information as possible and the picture which has returned to him is roughly as follows:

His source is indirectly in touch with an individual who claims to be a co-conspirator with the hijacker in this matter. The conspirator claims that the hijacker was a transient individual whom he met in a tavern. upon the latter's arrival on the ground. The co-conspirator did meet the hijacker and either found him to be injured or possibly killed himself. He buried both the hijacker and the money at the scene. He has not returned to the scene nor touched any of the money and has developed a severe paranoia about the entire incident. He is interested in being granted possible prosecutive immunity in order to overcome his feelings about the matter.

[] has no personal idea as to who either the hijacker or the co-conspirator may be.

[] was instructed to endeavor to maintain contact with his source to obtain any additional information possible and to attempt to obtain at least one of the bills in the original ransom money. He agreed to do so.

On 5/24/79, the above information was discussed with First Assistant U. S. Attorney [] for the District of Oregon. Re memo of [REDACTED] dated 3/10/79.

[REDACTED] Tacoma, Washington, was contacted at her residence with respect to information she provided the FBI that a person has been seen in her neighborhood, who strongly resembles the subject of this case.

Upon displaying identification to [REDACTED] and informing her that this response by the FBI was in connection with a telephone call she placed to the office at Seattle, Washington, on or about 3/10/79, she replied, "I make so many calls, I can't remember which one this one is about."

At this time, SA [REDACTED] recognized [REDACTED] by the tone of her voice as being an individual who regularly calls the Resident Agency to report suspicious circumstances in and around her neighborhood, continually suspects people of tapping her phone and admitted, during the interview, that she makes numerous telephone calls to the Tacoma Police Department to report a variety of things appearing in her neighborhood.

With respect to the information she provided concerning a look-alike for D. B. COOPER, [REDACTED] states that the [REDACTED] would come [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] stated that on many occasions, this man wore dark glasses and she described him as being around 30 to 35 years of age and having slightly reddish hair. She admitted talking to him once, when this look-alike was hauling away rubbish from the yard next door and, at that time, she thought the man acted in a suspicious and strange manner. contacted the Portland Office to furnish the following information:

Since the hijacker in this matter parachuted from the Northwest Orient airliner in the vicinity of Woodland, Washington, his newspaper has monitored the investigation and the readers have followed it with interest. He wondered whether there had been any recent developments in the investigation, and he was advised that investigation was continuing to identify and process logical suspects.

[redacted] advised that he understood there was a discrepancy between the name "D. B. COOPER" by which UNSUB is generally known and the name "DAN COOPER" by which UNSUB was also known. The reason for this discrepancy, which was an error in reporting made by an Associated Press reporter on the night of the hijacking, was explained to [redacted]

[redacted] then advised that recently a crude homemade gravestone had been discovered in a Woodland cemetery. This gravestone was made of concrete, and had the name "D. B. COOPER" scratched into it. The gravestone did not mark an actual grave, and was obviously merely a prank.

[redacted] Chuck Peterson Motors, 400 South University Avenue, Provo, Utah, advised that on April 5, 1972, RICHARD MC COY had his 1969 green Volkswagen, vehicle identification number [redacted] repaired at the above company. She noted the mileage of the car at the time of this repair to be 61,635. The work order was prepared at 8:10 A.M., on that date, and it was noted that an oil filter pipe needed tightening and that the mechanic should check on an oil leak. The repair order reflected that an oil cap gasket was replaced, that a lever on the idle cam was replaced, and that both brake light switches were replaced, as well as a tune-up. The charge included $16.10 for labor; $1.90 for oil and grease; $12.36 for parts; $1.37 for tacks, making a total of $31.73.

b7c

The bill was paid by a Master Charge card, of MC COY, number 53295 01 46 2886 3 03173, which amount was charged to the Chevron Oil Company inasmuch as Chuck Peterson Motor runs all their charges through Chevron Oil Company. Repairs have also been made by Chuck Peterson Motor on the above-mentioned car on previous occasions.

On November 25, 1970, a muffler was replaced on the car. The mileage at this time was 42,103.

Repairs made on June 23, 1971, for minor repairs were made, and a window crank installed. The mileage at this time was 51,004.

On September 10, 1971, the front wheels were balanced. On this occasion the mileage was noted to be 53,740.

On October 29, 1971, the car heater was repaired, and two hooks for holding seat belts when not in use were replaced. The mileage was noted to be 55,320 on this occasion.

On November 30, 1971, the motor was tuned up, carburetor was repaired, oil leaks and right window defroster were repaired, and the front end was aligned. The mileage was noted to be 57,042.

[] In regard to his limp, which was quite noticeable, [] indicated he had hurt his ankles in an accident near Des Moines, Iowa, on December 24, 1971, which had been investigated by a [] of the Des Moines, Iowa, Police Department. He stated, which he later refuted, he had been driving at that time a 1969 Dodge Polara, a State vehicle, which was involved in the accident. [] later refuted this to say that this was not the incident which hurt his ankles; however, he had hurt his ankles approximately five to six months ago in Des Moines, Iowa, when he had parachuted from an aircraft piloted by [] [] Municipal Airport, Mason City, Iowa. [] stated in regard to his parachuting experience he had parachuted for the military and since leaving the military he had parachuted several times as an amateur with police officer of Cerro Gordo County and police officers of Mason City, Iowa.

b7C

[] In response to several questions by Special Agent [] exhibited a good knowledge of aircrafts and parachuting techniques to the extent that how you would lower your landing gear and drop full flaps in order to slow an aircraft down to a landing speed and other semi-technical terminology which a person familiar with aircraft and parachuting techniques would use. [] stated one would be a fool for jumping from an aircraft over 10,000 feet and would be a fool to come out of an aircraft above 170 to 200 miles per hour as he might be caught in the air stream and be dashed against the fuselage of the aircraft.

b7C

[] indicated he had sold his former residence, [] Des Moines, Iowa, and had made an undisclosed amount of money from the sale. He further indicated he was divorced; however, he declined to mention his ex-wife's name or whereabouts.

b6
b7C

In regard to his hurt ankles, [] stated he had seen a doctor, name not recalled, at the VA (Veterans Administration) Hospital, Des Moines, Iowa, on March 30, 1972, at 9:30 a.m. He provided a slip which verified the place and date as an outpatient.

b6
b7C

SU 164-24
SE 164-81

[] stated he definitely had not been involved in the hijacking of Northwest Airlines Flight 305 on November 24, 1971, and further he had never been to the cities of Portland or Seattle, nor had he been to the states of Oregon or Washington. When asked if he had ever flown in a 727 jet aircraft, he stated that most likely he had as he has flown considerably between Des Moines, Iowa, and Alhambra, California.

b6
b7C

[] stated he owned a [] which he stated were in [] Alhambra, California.

b6
b7C

[] stated that presently his finances consisted of approximately [] Des Moines, Iowa, and []

b6
b7C

[] stated he had recently purchased, date not recalled, a [] in Las Vegas from an automobile company which he could not recall with a cashier's check in the amount of $1,800 drawn on the Bank of California. This vehicle was determined by Special Agent [] to bear Nevada License [] Vehicle Identification Number [] and to be a four-door sedan with black vinyl top and white body.

Reference Seattle letter to Minneapolis dated 5/23/79.

Enclosed for Seattle are the original and two copies of an FD-302 reflecting interview with [redacted] of Northwest Orient Airlines and an airplane decal which was enclosed in referenced letter for Minneapolis.

On 7/19/79, [redacted] advised that the probability that this decal came from the same aircraft hijacked by COOPER is about ninety-nine per cent. He noted that there is a slight difference in the color of the lettering of the decals placed on the aircraft and that recovered. This, of course, could be accounted for by the weather conditions. The second thing noted by [redacted] is that the decal does not appear to be as worn as one would think after having been located in the out state area for the past eight years. He thought that a decal in this condition would have been handled by predators more than it appears. [redacted] suggested that perhaps the Bureau could contact the manufacturer of the decal in order to determine if the decal could withstand the weathering conditions and still be in this condition.
